Find "Planted" Shark At Lake Margrethe

Lake Margrethe residents were the victims of a practical joker Saturday morning when a six-foot thresher shark was discovered on the beach, half in and half out of the water. Conservation officials were called to the scene by Don Weaver. Officer Russell Wright finally located the shark and brought it into the Conservation Equipment Station. A great many of the people in Grayling went to see the big fish, which was estimated to weigh about 125 lbs., and examination of it by Hatchery men produced the conclusion that the shark had either been freshly killed or had been quick-frozen immediately upon its capture within recent months. The shark was buried later on the same day. There is no information as yet as to who is responsible for bringing it to Lake Margrethe.

US-27 Towns To Pin Hopes On Strip Maps

Representatives of eight communities which will be affected by traffic diversions when Interstate 75 is opened are going to see if they can raise about $1,000 to buy strip maps showing natural attractions along Old 27.

This was the decision reached last Thursday night at a meeting of the representatives of the various towns and cities in the Otsego County Chamber of Commerce office.

They agreed that Grayling, Gaylord and Cheboygan would each share 25 per cent of the cost; Indian River would carry $100 and Frederic, Waters, Otsego Lake and Vandenberg would share 3.8 per cent of the cost.

Another meeting of the general group has been scheduled for 8 p. m., July 27, at the Timberly Motel to go over a rough layout of the strip map and get the figures on its cost.

The strip maps would be given to each community and distribution would be made through restaurants, gas stations, tourist information centers and other places.

Their purpose would be to interest travelers in getting off Interstate 75 onto Old 27, which will be the highway department's designation of that stretch of highway from Grayling through Frederic, Waters, Gaylord, Vandenberg, Wolverine and Indian River to Cheboygan, thence to the straits.

Strip maps, the group indicated, will be their first major attempt to lure travelers over Old 27. They have also discussed big highway signs.

Hoosier Guard To Train In 5 Divided Units

The Indiana Military Academy is first in the line conducting its summer training on the 2,417 acres of L. Benjamin Harrison from the 10th to the 24th June. The Academy, comprised of Officer Candidates and their training staff, is the main source of supply of new 2nd Lieutenants for the division.

The 38th Infantry Division Artillery units began training at Camp McCoy, Wisconsin, July 8th and remain until the 23rd. Camp McCoy offers a fully-equipped Army installation with 61,000 acres of well-maintained range firing sites.

The 1st Medium Tank Battalion and the 2nd Reconnaissance Squadron comprising the 138th Armor of the division will train at Camp Grayling, Michigan, from July 22nd to August 6th. Camp Grayling has 100,000 acres of rolling terrain which are ideal for tanks and other track vehicles both for maneuvers and firing exercises.

Training from July 22nd to August 6th at Ft. Riley, Kansas, the 3rd Rocket Howitzer Battalion, 138th Artillery, will again use the 57,000 acres of this fort for intensive training with the "Honorable John" rocket, concentrating on Fire Direction and the actual mechanics of the weapon which has an atomic capability.

The 38th Infantry Division, minus the above-mentioned units, will again return to Camp Grayling, Michigan, training from July 29th to August 13th. Minus approximately 3,000 troops, the division will have a field training strength of about 7,000 officers and men.

US-27 Crash Takes Two Lives

A two-car head-on collision on US-27 at the Sand Hill curve north of Grayling last Friday afternoon resulted in the death of a Saginaw woman and a Bay City man. Michigan National Guardsmen arriving at the crash scene in a convoy, went to the aid of the victims and directed traffic around the site.

They administered first aid, rushed the three victims to a hospital, directed traffic around the wreckage of the two cars, donated blood, and even provided physicians and medical assistants.

A car driven by Harold J. Resume, 28, of 206 Atlantic Bay City, veered out of control on a sharp curve on US-27 and collided head-on with the auto of Robert Stinson, 69, and his wife, Vera, 59, of Saginaw.

Resume and Mrs. Stinson were injured critically. Moments later a convoy of trucks of the 2nd Howitzer Battalion, 182nd Artillery of Detroit, came upon the wreckage while returning to camp from a firing range.

1st/Sgt. Stephen Kazup, a World War II paratrooper who headed the convoy, took charge. Kazup, in civilian life an Oak Park police man, posted guards to direct traffic while a medic administered first aid.

The victims were rushed to Grayling Mercy hospital in the convoy's ambulance. Emergency surgery was needed. So the 107th Medical Battalion from Detroit was called from camp. The doctors who responded were Maj. Kenneth K. Newton of Detroit and Maj. Raymond H. Suwinski of Grosse Pointe Shores.

First to give blood was Maj. Clint V. Spawr, 47, of Lansing, in civilian life a state police lieutenant, who is office commander at state police operations in East Lansing.

Following surgery, Mrs. Stinson and Resume were placed on the critical list. Stinson, less seriously hurt, was transferred to St. Luke's hospital at Saginaw.

Mrs. Stinson succumbed on Saturday from injuries received in the crash. Resume succumbed Monday night as the result of injuries.

Funeral services for Charles M. Given, 44, will be held this Thursday at 2 o'clock from the Sorenson Funeral Home, with the Rev. Alvin Johnson officiating. Interment will be in the Beaver Creek Cemetery.

Thousands Attend Division Review On Saturday

CAMP GRAYLING — After a full weekend of colorful ceremonies, the nearly 8,000 Michigan National Guardsmen here at this vast military reservation moved into the final five days of their 1931 summer encampment Monday morning.

Some 3,000 visitors jammed the huge tent city located on the southern shores of Lake Margrethe over the mid-weekend to visit their husbands, sons and friends and to witness the spectacular all Division review Sunday morning, and the impressive Memorial services to departed Guardsmen on Sunday.

While the weatherman cooperated with sunshine for both of these major events, sudden, sporadic heavy thunder showers prevailed throughout the weekend and continued into Monday as the troops trekked to their assigned bivouac areas. The four days of field exercises will climax the squad and platoon army testing program and combined arms training program with live ammunition for the first year by the Guard since World War II.

Scattered throughout the 138,000 acre reservation, personnel of the "Iron Fist" division made their quarters in pup-tents, employing foxholes in a simulated defense battle situation located some 60 miles to the rear of the forward edge of the battle area.

Continued emphasis was being placed on night training on platoons as they underwent maneuvers using live firing for the first time. The bivouac ends with the return of the troops to the main camp Friday morning in time to clean equipment and pack up for the move early Saturday morning to their home stations.

Over 600 Guardsmen will be airlifted back to their home stations in giant C-119's by members of the 403rd Troop Carrier Wing, Air Force Reserve unit.

The 2,500 troops in the main camp will not have to be torn apart this year as the Guardsmen depart. They will be left for the Indiana Guard which takes over on Saturday.

The highlight of the week of course, occurs Friday when the troops receive their pay and allowances for the 15-days of field training. A pay-roll of more than $800,000 will be distributed to the Guardsmen.

Activities of the past weekend centered around the annual visit of the Guard's commander-in-chief, Gov. John B. Swainson. Reading a long list of visiting dignitaries was the Fifth United States Army commander, Lt. Gen. Emerson L. Cummings, of Chicago and Maj. Gen. Paul A. Mayo, Chief of Finance, U. S. Army, who presented the official Army flag with its 145 streamers attached to the 46th Infantry Division.

As a prelude to the review, the Governor presented the coveted Eisenhower Trophy to Battery "A", 2nd Howitzer Battalion, 119th Artillery of Albion for being the most outstanding company-sized unit in the Michigan National Guard last year. He also presented the prized Brig. Gen. Earl R. Stewart medal to S/Sgt. Kenneth E. Frownfelter, Jr. of Co. D, 2nd Battle Group, 125th Infantry of Flint for being the most outstanding individual soldier of the field training period in the Guard.

As a complete surprise to Maj. Gen. Cecil J. Kennedy, commanding general of the Michigan division, he heard Mayor Charles A. Mobley, of the general's home town, proclaim Saturday as "Cecil J. Kennedy Day" in Flint. Gov. Swainson also read a state citation to the veteran soldier who retires next February on his 62nd birthday.

Late Friday units will break camp and begin to make preparations for the movement home. Unit commanders will also take advantage of a few spare hours to make up any lost training time before the final camp critique called by Gen. Kennedy for Friday afternoon.

Department of Administration Releases "Budget in Brief"

THE "BUDGET IN BRIEF" for the fiscal year which started July 1 was just released by the Department of Administration.

The report shows that 40 cents out of every tax dollar collected by the State of Michigan goes for education; an estimated $485 million a year.

The next largest amount, 18.8 cents goes for highways, with 14.6 cents goes for welfare; 6.5 cents goes for mental health; 2.1 cents for public health; 1.8 cents goes for general administration; 1.9 cents for conservation and agriculture; 1.6 cents for prisons; 1.1 cents goes for the State Police. Regulatory services, debt service and other miscellaneous expenditures amount to 11.6 cents.

The booklet is designed to simplify the State's complex budget so that it can be understood by the average person. "An informed public is the best guarantee for good government," Gov. John B. Swainson said in a foreword he wrote for the booklet.

"It is to inform our people that this State Budget, in brief, is published," Swainson said.

"State government is the people's business" and "it is important that they know how the money they pay as taxes is spent by their elected public officials."

More than half the taxes collected by the State are returned for the use of local governmental units and that the remaining money "is being spent most efficiently by the State," said the Governor.

"In this connection, it is to be hoped that a recent U. S. Bureau of the Census report indicates that Michigan requires only 4.3 employees per 1,000 population for the conduct of the state's services, compared to the national average of 5.7 for all states," Swainson concluded.

THE BIGGEST PUBLIC WORKS program in Michigan history is entering its final stages.

Four years ago this summer, State Highway Commissioner John C. Mackie outlined plans for a five-year, $1.4 billion highway construction program.

It called for construction of 900 miles of freeways, modernization of more than 3,000 miles of other highways, and elimination of all gravel roads on the state highway system.

There were a few skeptics, including some in the Highway Department, who said it "couldn't be done." Never before had a Highway Commissioner anywhere in the U. S. announced construction plans that far in advance.

There is no doubt Mackie took a gamble when he unveiled his program. Any number of things—weather, right-of-way problems, or the capacity of the road building industry to do the work—could have thrown the program off the track.

The five-year program, now in its final year, got off to a slow start but gradually picked up steam. Within two years, the number of miles of freeway had doubled, from 101 miles in 1957, to more than 200 miles. By the end of the third year, it had tripled and today, Michigan has 550 miles of freeway open to traffic, more than five times as much as it had when Mackie took office.

And the final miles of gravel highway will be moved early next year. There were more than 800 miles of gravel road on the state highway system four years ago.

By the end of this year, the Highway Department expects to open its 800th mile of freeway and will pass the 1,000-mile mark by the end of 1962.

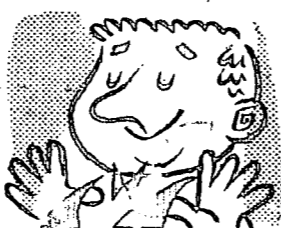

Most of these freeways are on the 41,000-mile Interstate System of Defense Highways and are marked with red, white and blue signs.

Michigan has been one of the leading states in building its share of the Interstate system.

Since last December, it has possessed the longest continuous stretch of toll-free Interstate highway in the nation, a 203-mile highway from Detroit to St. Ignace on Lake Michigan, which is known as Interstate 94.

Michigan aims to keep its lead as the nation's number one road building state. Right now, more than 300 miles of freeway are under construction throughout the state, including 140 miles between Mt. Pleasant and Indian River.

This is the longest continuous highway construction project in Michigan history and one of the longest ever built at one time anywhere in the United States.

The Editor

Crawford Co. Avalanche Grayling, Michigan

Dear Sir:

I write from the Sanctuary, a refuge for homeless dogs upon a hill-farm in southern Indiana. I am the staff — the one fighting woman who is trying to hold the place together. In times past, those who love dogs have been good to us and so we ask again, bearing in mind our debt in gratitude.

We need food (of any sort), old towels, blankets or pieces. Just about anything can find application here.

Forty-five cold noses and warm hearts salute you!

MICHIGAN IS NATURAL GAS

Industries need natural gas. And Michigan gives it to them—all they want—for a multitude of uses: food processing, sand drying, die casting, metal melting, and many more.

Michigan, in fact, ranks among the nation's leaders in available gas resources. Not only does it have gas-producing wells, but it is supplied more than 281 billion cubic feet annually by three major interstate pipeline companies. Natural gas is available to 75% of the state's population in some 500 communities.

But the secret of Michigan's undiminished quantities of natural gas is found in its 12 vast underground storage reservoirs. In these are stored the excess quantities produced in slow seasons, ready for distribution during peak periods.

Help carry Michigan's message to the nation. Clip these ads and mail them to people in other states with your own comment. Let's talk up Michigan and its advantages for industry. Together, we can assure a greater future for all of us.

MICHIGAN IS EVERYTHING FOR INDUSTRY

No Meat In Moscow . . .

"No Meat in Moscow". That was a title of a recent editorial in the Muncie, Indiana, Star — and it has so significant a bearing on developments in this country that Congressman Halleck read it into the Congressional Record.

The editorial began by pointing out that the proposed new farm law would make it possible to put hogs or cattle, and perhaps other livestock, under government marketing orders — and if that should happen, free agriculture would be just about through in this country. Then the Star said: "Acute meat shortage has hit Moscow. . . . The Government in Russia, operating in accordance with the Communist theory of national planning, sets the amount of meat which Soviet citizens need to consume and which Red farmers are to produce. An AP correspondent who toured the state-run butcher shops in Moscow failed to find a single scrap of fresh meat, not even sausages. Canned meat from Bulgaria and dried fish were available.

"Meat could be bought in the central market where the peasants bring produce grown on their private plots of land. But the peasants set their own prices in that market, and chunks of beef including the bone were being sold for 4.75 rubles per kilogram, or more than $2 per pound. The peasants were selling eggs for 16 cents each

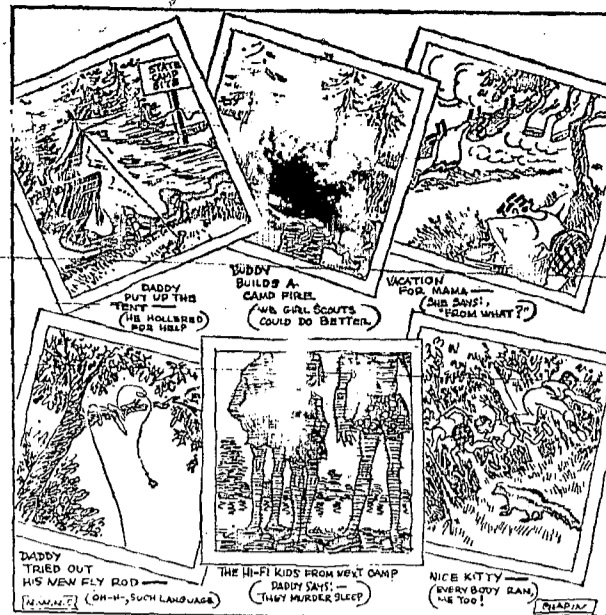

"If an American farmer, or any American Congressman wants to know how a controlled agriculture operates, all he has to do is look at Russia. Government control of supply, which the Communists have in Russia, will bring meatless days to Washington. . . . The United States doesn't need to adopt any plan of this kind."

Headlines Don't Make Jobs . . .

Newspapers are full of accounts of federal agencies launching costly programs to stimulate economic activity. But so far, no sensible program of tax incentives on depreciation allowances to encourage job creating industrial development has materialized.

In the words of columnist, David Lawrence: "Business doesn't really know what to expect, and many of the plans that should long ago have been under way to construct new plants haven't been launched. All the benefits to employment that would have been derived from the heavy goods industries if a broader policy on depreciation had been formulated have, therefore, not been forthcoming."

It takes more than headline-chasing bureaus to promote real national growth.

The Rubie Babbitt Chapter of the Isak Walton League will sponsor the annual canoe carnival which will be held this year on Saturday and Sunday, August 13th and 14th. This year's carnival, according to present plans, will be bigger and better than ever and the program of events will prove more varied and interesting than in former years. The carnival will start Saturday afternoon with water sports and contests at the City Park, and prizes will be given to the winners of these contests. The water carnival and contests will be handled by a committee headed by Jack Redhead. In the evening an inter-season boxing tournament will be staged at the high school auditorium. The following day the boats will head their way down the main stream of the AuSable. It is planned to end the trip at Tom Wells' place where a chicken dinner will be served.

The Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring the opening of a Guide School in Grayling, which is a W. P. A. project. Regular Board of Directors meeting 20 June 1961.
Members present: Wolff, Latuszek, Rochette, Gust, Johnson.
Members absent: Schulze, DuBois, Bond, Janssen.
Guests: C. H. Holcomb.

The meeting was called to order by President Leon Rochette at 5:05 p. m.
Motion by Wolff and seconded by Latuszek that the minutes of the last meeting of June 8th be approved as written.
Due to the absence of the treasurer, no report was given. The manager presented the board with the total balance in the treasury and the outstanding bills.

Motion by Latuszek and seconded by Wolff that the invoice for the maps from the Cadillac Printing Company be paid.

It was suggested by C. R. Holcomb that all other Chamber of Commerce members be listed on next year's county maps.

A report was given by Wolff on the N.Y.C. Railroad hearing. No conclusions were reached. This hearing is to be continued on July 19th. Mr. Wolff recommended that the chamber be represented and offered to chairman another committee. Mr. Giegling plans to be in attendance.

Motion by Wolff and seconded by Gust that this meeting be adjourned at 6:00 p. m.

Sister Of One Of Grayling's Planners Is 100 Years Old

The Saline Reporter, in its July 5th edition, carries the headline "Happy 100th Birthday, Fredericka" across the top of the front page, in tribute to Mrs. Fredericka McBride, who celebrated her 100th birthday on July 14. The town decided that such a rare event should be celebrated by a month-long observance. To quote from the Saline Reporter, "After all, as she said herself, you only get to be a centenarian once in 100 years. Alert and sociable, Mrs. McBride is perfectly capable of carrying off her guest-of-honor role no matter how big the crowd. She has never been seriously ill in her life, with the exception of the broken kneecap she suffered last winter, and she bounced back from that in record time."

"Born July 14, 1861, when Abraham Lincoln was President and Saline wasn't even a village, she is the youngest child of Jonathan E. and Charlotte Josephens, of York township."

Mrs. McBride's brother, Timothy Josephens, born in 1853, one of thirteen children, came to America from Wurtemberg, Germany, in 1855. While a student of civil engineering at the University of Michigan he was one of group sent out by the University to survey the land and plot the town of Grayling, as a part of his university course before he received his degree. His sister, Mrs. McBride, was the youngest of the thirteen and was born in Scio Township, Washtenaw County, near Ann Arbor. She is the only surviving member of the immediate family, but there are several nieces and nephews. She is still very active and in fairly good health, reading and mending without glasses. She takes pride in the upkeep of the Jowers, shrubs and trees at her home, most of which she planted when she moved to Saline 34 years ago.

Information in the story above was furnished to the Grayling Chamber of Commerce by Mrs. Norman Guenther of 5380 South Maple Road, Ann Arbor, a friend of Mrs. McBride's.

Common to Michigan's lowlands and waters are these ten armored members of the reptile family. Snappers, Blandings, and painted turtles are found throughout most of the state. All others, except the spotted turtle, are residents of the southern lower peninsula. Wood turtles live in the upper peninsula and northern two-thirds of the lower peninsula. In general, all ten are harmless. Actually, they are beneficial in that most of them keep waters free of dead fish and animals. Some feed on mosquito pupae and insects which prey on fish. A few eat fish or their eggs and young, but only to a limited degree. Their fabled slowness about is paralleled by slow growth which perhaps accounts for their long life. Some turtles are said to live much longer than humans. Turtles are easily identified by their familiar back shell and belly plate. This armor is their best means of defense since they are too slow to escape predators by running away.—Mich. Dept. of Conservation

LANSING — Painfully slow about and unequipped to ward off predators—except in the case of snappers—turtles have, nonetheless, plodded the face of the earth for more than 200 million years. Here in Michigan, 10 distinct types of turtles have trudged down through the sands of time. Snappers, Blandings, and painted turtles are found throughout most of the state. Soft-shell, box, spotted, map, musk and slider turtles are residents of the southern lower peninsula while wood turtles live in the upper peninsula and the northern two-thirds of the lower peninsula.

The secret of survival which has carried their family name from the distant past to present lies in their familiar tough, horny shells. Armored like miniature tanks, turtles are able to withdraw their head, legs and — in some species — tail into the protected confines of their shell when trouble threatens. The hard, scuted armor per se acts as this defensive move and with his powerful jaws strikes back at his enemies, big or small, with a vengeance.

As this might indicate, Michigan's turtles have some differences in appearance, habits and temperament. Some are good social "mixers" while others are "loners." They prefer different places to live and different foods appeal to their appetites. On the other hand, these 10 species have many things in common besides their protective plating and slowness. As members of the reptile class, all are cold-blooded. That is, their body temperature rises and falls with that of the air and water. During the winter months, turtles are very inactive; some species stay on the lake or stream bottom, some bury themselves in the bottom mud, while others hibernate in soil of their liking which may be some distance from water. When warm weather arrives, they come to life in the lowlands and waters. In the summer, turtles bury their eggs in nests dug into porous, upland soils where the eggs are left alone to hatch.

While in their winter hibernation, they go without renewing the air in their lungs. However, in the summer, they need air to breathe and will drown if kept under water long.

The fabled slowness of foot is not a slow growth which perhaps, explains their long life. Some turtles are said to live much longer than humans. The common box turtle frequently lives for over half a century and possibly reaches a maximum ripe old age of 125 years. Speaking of being slow, one observer clocked a box turtle traveling at one mile per nine and one-half hours. This, incidentally, was the turtle's normal cruising speed.

In general, turtles are harmless. Most of them serve as good outdoor "housekeepers" by keeping waters free of dead fish and animals. Some feed on mosquito pupae and insects which prey on fish, or on slugs, snails and other mollusks which harbor fish parasites during certain stages of their life cycle. A few turtles eat fish or their eggs and young, but only to a limited degree.

Michigan's largest and most pugnacious turtle is the snapper which averages about 10-12 inches in length and weighs six pounds. (It may exceed two feet in length and weigh more than 30 pounds). A dweller of sluggish streams, ponds and lakes, the snapper is a vicious fighter. When encountered on land, the snapper holds its ground, thrusts its head forward, snapping its powerful jaws with lightning speed. Sometimes, its large head may be launched with such force that its entire body is carried off the ground.

Color of the snapper's back shell is dark olive, brown, or black. This turtle has a pronounced saw-tooth ridge on top of its tail. Another mean customer on defense is the soft-shell turtle, fastest swimmer of all Michigan turtles. Also known as the "leather-back" for its rubbery, smooth back shell, this turtle comes close to the snapper in size and is identified by its long, flexible snout. It likes to bask on sand bars or grassy banks and prefers rivers and lakes with soft, muddy bottoms.

The Blandings—turtle is more gentle-natured. Like the snapper, it is aquatic and favors slow-flowing streams, lakes and ponds. It is marked with a bright yellow throat and light, yellowish irregular flecks on its back shell. Unlike the state's other turtles, the likable box turtle is strictly a land-lubber with its favorite haunts open and wooded lowlands. As its name implies, this turtle has a box-like shell. Its colors vary quite a bit, with yellowish spots, blotches, or stripes on a brown or blackish ground color. The box turtle has been gifted with a hinged belly plate which allows it to withdraw its legs as well as its head inside the shell. Its shell can then be closed tightly at both ends so seal off trouble. This turtle makes an excellent pet.

Few turtles are as attractively marked as the painted turtle. The upper part of its back shell has large brownish or slate-colored plates with yellowish edges. The lower edge of this shell is ornamented with red stripes or spots. Its blackish head is set off by two pairs of large yellow spots behind the eyes. The turtle's throat is marked with yellow stripes that change to red farther back on the neck, and there are red stripes on its forelimbs and tail. The painted turtle may be seen basking on logs and muskrat homes in lakes, sluggish streams and marshes, but not in the "muck" it is quick to scramble off into the water when approached. One or more rounded, orange-yellow spots on each scale of the back shell—help to identify the spotted turtle, rare in Michigan. Small and mild mannered, this turtle likes quiet waters and marshes.

The wood turtle has a raised, ridge-like keel on the midline of its back shell. This shell is rough, with each of the horny plates raised as a sort of flat pyramid. The wood turtle spends much of its time on land in woods and pastures during the summer, returning to swampy regions in the fall to hibernate.

The map turtle gets its name from an irregular network of yellowish lines on its back shell resembling a road map. Strictly a water dweller, this turtle is fond of basking, and is mildly pugnacious when cornered.

Having a somewhat cantankerous character is the musk turtle. When he envisions himself in danger, this little turtle spews a (C. "nued on Next Page") strong musky odor which has earned him the nickname "stink-pot." At the same time, he opens his jaws widely and hisses. He seldom bites. The musk turtle sticks closely to the bottom of ponds and lakes.

Arr-chested-body and frequent line-like red spot behind the eye help to identify the rare slider turtle which is thought to have been rather recently introduced in all of these turtles are believed to be edible, but the box and wood turtles should be ruled out during seasons when their flesh may possibly be contaminated from eating poisonous mushrooms. The soft-shell is probably the most prized for eating while the snapper runs a close second. The map and blanding turtles are while there, but are not marketed while the painted, spotted, and slider turtles are usually bypassed as food because of their small size. The musk turtle fails to whet but the hardest of appetites because of its pungent odor.

We All Buy The Image

Did you ever stop to think of what it is that makes people buy one product rather than another? Or why one business prospers and another fails?

F. C. Welsh is the psychology experts, it's the public's mental "image" - or mental picture - of a product or business that accounts for its success or failure. Sometimes a good image of a business or product can be built up by clever advertising propaganda to bring overnight success.

Often this is the case with a new product, introduced to the market with an expensive advertising splash. But the image never lasts unless the product delivers the satisfaction it promises. Unless the picture of promised satisfaction is REAL. This is true of all advertising that doesn't represent the facts. Its cost represents wasted money.

Our basic attitude in running a car dealership is to create the kind of establishment that we would want to do business with. IF WE WERE THE CUSTOMERS. Customers want honest treatment, truthful guarantees, good service and fair value in everything. Give them that and you'll keep them.

We hope, in talking honestly to you about the car business in this column, that we can convey to you a true picture of our business. Should you decide to patronize us, we don't intend to waste our advertising dollars by not following through with the satisfaction we promise.
